

OBITUARY

The Hackettstown Gazette relates a death from wearing colored stockings. The youngest child of Jacob Niper, of Petersburg, walked some distance, with her parents, wearing a new pair of shoes and red stockings. Her foot was irritated by the shoe, of which she complained, but her parents anticipated no serious developments. They returned home and soon after the child's mind became affected. She continued to grow worse, and a physician was called, but despite his efforts the disease terminated in spasms from which she rapidly sank and died as above stated.
